

School Psychologist, BlendED National

Hobart, Tasmania

Ongoing – 0.6 FTE

Commencing ASAP, 2026

About us

BlendED National is a new and exciting initiative of Edmund Rice Education Australia (EREA), providing flexible, inclusive education for young people across the country who are unable to access traditional schooling.

Delivered online by a multidisciplinary team, BlendED National supports young people through trauma-informed, relationship-based learning that prioritises safety, connection, and individualised support. The program is designed to meet the needs of young people experiencing complex barriers to education, and is grounded in EREA's commitment to educational equity and radical inclusion.

Our Young People

Young people come from diverse backgrounds and often face a significant and complex range of educational, social, developmental, environmental, psychological, health, legal barriers to learning which require unique interventions. Our approach is grounded in the Operation By Principles framework, which combines education with an understanding of trauma-informed practices.

We recognise that each young person's journey is unique. Our staff are committed to providing a safe, respectful, and empowering learning environment where young people can develop confidence, reconnect with education, and work towards their goals.

Our Team

BlendED National has opened its first school in Hobart, Tasmania, supported by a newly formed team including a Principal, Program Directors, Teachers, and Youth Workers.

The Role

We are seeking a School Psychologist to join our team in Hobart. The School Psychologist supports the academic, social, emotional, and behavioural development of students by conducting early screenings, completing initial assessments, and coordinating referrals to external services when required. A key part of the role is building staff capability and supervising Learning Support Officers, ensuring evidence-based practice, high-quality support for diverse learners, and compliance with the NCCD framework.
